RYAN GARRETT (A'06)

My artistic practice consists of films, videos, photographs, drawings, texts, and installations. Through intensive research involving the analysis of cultural documents and media, my work focuses on the philosophical implications of the writing and imaging of history. In my work I seek to uncover new concepts and forms out of the latent poetic qualities found in material representations of historical experience. Images, quotations and the forms and processes of cultural representation and production are used as associative material in the ongoing construction of new sentences and narratives. My recent work consists of a series of films, presentations, and drawings grouped under the dossier Wildman. Wildman explores Western notions of wildness, creativity, and narrative through an imagined production of a film of the same title.
